HIS GRACE THE ARCHBISHOP OF YORK.

Treasurer: REV. T. A. SEDGWICK.

This Society augments the stipends of Curates who have been more than 15 years in Holy Orders and are still in full active work. Of the 7,000 Curates very many have been ordained more than 15 years, and this number is annually increasing. It is the only Society in England that directly increases the Stipends of Curates of long standing. The "QUEEN VICTORIA CLERGY FUND" does not help the Unbeneficed Clergy. The Church is multiplying Curates three times as rapidly as she is multiplying Benefices. Nearly 20,000 was voted last year in grants. The average stipend of those receiving Grants does not exceed £3 a week.

ESTABLISHED IN 1883

In view of the fact that the sons and daughters of Knights have a certain definite position assigned to them in the general scale of Precedence, it is only right and fitting that, as such, Knights' living Issue included for first time. they should have place in "Debrett." It has, therefore, been decided to include particulars of their names, dates of birth, marriages, residences, etc., and these have this year been added for the first time, thus incorporating in the present issue a vast amount of additional information in this connection not hitherto accessible, the details of which must prove of special interest and value. It should be noted that this has been done without any increase in the published price of the volume, although it has entailed the addition of a large number of extra pages.

Where both parents appear in different families or sections of the work, the children of the marriage are, in accordance with the scheme adopted throughout the book, placed under the father's name, and this same rule now also applies to the Knight-age, but not in that section in the case of Knights' grandchildren who cannot be recorded there. Children under Father's name.

In course of gathering together the above-mentioned new details, some unusual points of view were disclosed. One gentleman well-known in literary and artistic circles, while forwarding the desired particulars, added, "All this means an uncertain amount of work, certainly to me, about the time required for writing a short article"; another wished it to be stated that his progeny were "too numerous to mention"; and yet a third wrote even more emphatically in the same strain, but in his case the details eventually arrived and disclosed thirty-eight Christian names. Quaint Replies.

As foreshadowed in the Preface to the last edition of "Debrett," the Barony of Whitburgh, to which Sir Thomas Borthwick, Bt., would have been raised had he survived, was, on Whitburgh and Bagot. December 10th, 1912, conferred upon his eldest son, who took his seat in the House of Lords the same day.

At a later date, in February 1913, the other sons and daughters of Sir Thomas Borthwick, Bt., were raised to the rank of Baron's issue, his widow also being at the same time granted the style and title of Baroness, but in her case without precedence as such, as the rights, privileges, and precedence belonging by statute or common law to the widow of a Peer, cannot be enjoyed in virtue of a Peerage which has not in fact passed the Great Seal. Another somewhat similar case has also occurred this year, as Lieut.-Col. Josceline FitzRoy Bagot, who in the New Year List of Honours had been nominated for a Baronetcy, died in March before the Patent granting it had been completed. Subsequently the Baronetcy was bestowed upon his eldest son, and in November a Patent of Precedency as a Baronet's widow was gazetted in favour of the widow; the difficulty mentioned above not arising in the case of a Baronetcy.

It is many years since the Committee for Privileges of the House of Lords has had before it so many cases involving claims to ancient titles; some have already been adjudicated upon, others yet await decision. After 335 years the abeyance in the Barony of Latymer (created by writ 1431-3) was determined on December 13th, 1912, in favour of Francis Burdett Thomas Money-Coutts, the claim to it having already been favourably reported upon by the Committee some months previously. The Furnivall Barony, too (also created by writ, in 1295), which fell into abeyance in 1777, has been successfully claimed by the Hon. Mary Frances Katherine Petre, only child of the 14th Baron Petre, in whose favour it was called out of abeyance in May.

Latymer and Furnivall
Abeyances Determined.

The Duke of Atholl claimed, as senior co-heir, the Earldom of Oxford (created in 1156), but was unsuccessful, the Committee for Privileges finding that the Act of 1392 restricted the Earldom to "heirs male for ever," so that, although it can now never become extinct, neither can it pass through the female line. Concerning the joint claim to the Baronies of Strabolgi, Cobham, and Burgh, by three co-heirs, the House of Lords has not yet come to a final decision, the case being down for further hearing next Session.

Oxford.

Strabolgi, Cobham, and Burgh.

It should be borne in mind that when Baronies by Writ are called out of abeyance in favour of one of several co-heirs, they are confirmed to the successful petitioner and his or her immediate descendants and cannot pass by succession further than that, failing whom the title would pass to the next heir of the original grantee, and if the representation was vested in co-heirs, it would again fall into abeyance pending some future application to the Committee for Privileges.

Descent of Titles Called Out of Abeyance.

Further Royal Tours through industrial centres have taken place in the year now drawing to a close, and while in Lancashire His Majesty took the opportunity of making his pleasure known that when present, in the County Palatine the toast of his health should be submitted in the terms of "The Duke of Lancaster." This was presumably in virtue of possession of the Duchy of Lancaster, the estates of which are held by the Sovereign separate from the estates of the Crown, for, as it has been made, although they may be expected early in 1914, after the necessary adjustments in the dioceses affected have taken place. The addition to the Judicial Bench of two Lords of Appeal in Ordinary was also authorised, and they have already been appointed, as well as an additional Judge to the King's Bench Division.

In connection with the titles chosen by recently created Peers, two points of interest arise. In the case of both Lord Parker of Waddington and Lord Sydenham of Combe, the designations gazetted are respectively, "Parker of Waddington, of Waddington, co. York," and "Sydenham of Combe, of Combe, Dulverton, co. Somerset," so that there can be no mistake that the "of Waddington" and "of Combe" are intended to be part of the title. This would seem to be a new departure, and one that will tend to make clear a point hitherto often in doubt as to whether the designation as gazetted should be considered part of the title or not. Again, the choice of the title of Lord Sumner, by the Rt. Hon. Sir John Andrew Hamilton upon his appointment as a Lord of Appeal in Ordinary, appears to form another precedent, as being the first occasion upon which a Lord of Appeal in Ordinary has not taken his title from his surname, either with or without a qualifying territorial designation.

Among other happenings have been the bestowal of precedence as the widow of a K.C.B. upon the wife of the late Captain Robert Filson Scott, C.V.O., R.N. who so tragically met his death in the Antarctic, and a Companionship of the Bath upon Commander Edward Ratchiffe Guth Russell Evans, R.N., who took up the control of the expedition in its later stages. The "Father of the House of Lords" has passed away in the person of Earl Nelson (who had been a Member of that House since 1844), and so also has the doyen of Baronets, Sir Harry Mordaunt Vavasour, 3rd Bt. (creation 1801). The Barony of Stafford has devolved through the female line upon a male representative, succession releasing the Baronetcy of Cossey (creation 1621), the death of that famous soldier Viscount Wolseley, honoured with a public funeral, caused his Barony to become extinct, but the Viscounty descended under special remainder to his daughter, on the other hand, the Viscounty of Hambleden, which was first conferred upon the widow of the Rt. Hon. William Henry Smith, has now been inherited by her son, by the death of Lord Macnaghten a Life Peerage became extinct, by which another Baronetcy (creation 1836) was released. On retirement from the Lord Chief Justiceship, Lord Alverstone was raised to a Viscounty, and upon the death of Viscount Tredegar the Barony, which had been coupled with the superior dignity, passed in succession, the Viscounty becoming extinct.

The aggregate of new Honours conferred between December 6th, 1912, and December 5th, 1913, totals 375. In addition to the Viscounty bestowed on Baron Alverstone, as mentioned above, and many promotions made in the ranks of the Year's Honours. various Orders of Knighthood, this number comprises 3 Hereditary* and 2 Life Peerages†, 4 Hereditary and 1 Life Peerage‡ becoming extinct; 16 Baronets§, 3 Baronetcies|| having lapsed, 18 Members¶ sworn of the Privy Council; 136 Knights, and 200 Companions nominated to various Orders.

Tabulated below will be found statistics of the new honours that have been granted, the hereditary dignities which have become extinct, and the number of deaths that Statistics. have occurred among Peers (Spiritual and Temporal), Peeresses,

All communications receive most careful consideration, and any corrections or additions which will add to the accuracy or completeness of the work are equally carefully dealt with, but wholesale excisions of material dates or of facts, which in the nature of things cannot possibly have altered since they were recorded, cannot be made, otherwise the value and usefulness of "Debrett" as a standard work of reference could not be properly maintained, neither is it possible, as some few correspondents would seem to imagine, to alter the scheme of the book to suit individual ideas. If, therefore, I have not always found myself able to give effect to every correction or suggestion furnished, it is not the result of inattention or discourtesy, but only for the reasons above stated.

To many of the Officers of Arms (especially to Charles H. Athill, M V O, F S A, Richmond Herald), as well as to all those correspondents who have been good enough in the past few months to reply to the inquiries addressed to them, I am much indebted, and once again offer my sincere thanks for the help afforded in preparing the present volume of "Debrett"

the best for the eyesight and decorations of all the many forms of :: :: ::

COUNTRY HOUSE LIGHTING.

The ATOZ (A1 and B) types of Acetylene Plant give you Acetylene at its best.

These plants are installed in many of the largest mansions, as well as some of the small cottages in the land.

Over 3,000 complete plants have been installed since 1895 without a single failure.

With Acetylene lighting (on the ATOZ A1 or B principles) there is no dangerous petrol or flimsy mantles, no hissing at burners, no dirt or heat, no electric wires or switches to fuse leaving you in darkness or your house in flames. You simply use Carbide of Calcium and water, and your gardener or odd man can do all that is required year in and year out. There is no depreciation of plant and renewals and repairs are practically nil.

The work must, however, be well done and to this end we undertake everything from gas plant to burner—we install the system in your house—guarantee no smell and keep you supplied regularly with carbide.

We guarantee a complete plant of any size to cost less than one quarter the same size electric plant, and considerably less than an air gas plant, and the upkeep (the total upkeep) is one quarter the upkeep of electric light and 25 per cent less than petrol air gas light.

Daimler

Classic Design

THE "Special Daimler" is a classic in car design. ❀ ❀ ❀ In it, the man of position obtains the very perfection of the horseless carriage. ❀ ❀ ❀ Unsurpassable in the completeness of its refinement and the luxury of its comfort, its dignity of appearance so completely removes all suggestion of ostentation that possession sets the cachet of good taste, as well as sound judgment, on the owner's choice. ❀ ❀ ❀ The luxurious comfort of riding in Daimler coach work on the Daimler suspension is made perfect by the smooth power of the Daimler silent engine and the noiseless operation of the Daimler axle. ❀ ❀ ❀ Chassis and coachwork are alike perfection.

TABLES OF GENERAL PRECEDENCE.

PRECEDENCE of Ladies is always derived from the father, or husband, except in the case of a Peeress in her own right.

Official precedence, such as that of the Great Officers of State, confers no corresponding precedence on their wives or daughters.

The wives and issue of Archbishops and Bishops at present have no special precedence as such.

A Dowager Peeress, or Baronetess, while a widow, by custom, takes precedence of the wife of the incumbent of the title.

The children of a living Peer, or Baronet, have precedence above the children of the previous possessor, or possessors, of the title.

If the daughter of a Peer marries a Peer she takes her husband's rank, but if she marry the eldest or younger son of a Peer she ranks either according to her own inherent precedence (i.e., as the daughter of her father), or according to that of her husband (i.e., as the wife of the eldest or younger son of a Duke, Marquess, Earl, etc.), whichever happens to be the higher, no matter what the courtesy title may be.

To Foreign Ambassadors modern practice concedes precedence immediately after the Royal Family, while to Foreign Ministers and Envoys place is usually allowed after Dukes and before Marquesses.

Foreign Titles of Nobility borne by British subjects afford their holders no precedence whatever in this country, and strictly speaking a Royal License should be obtained for their use.

TITLES, ORDERS, AND DEGREES OF PRECEDENCE AND DIGNITY.

THE ROYAL CROWN * (AS HERALDICALLY DEPICTED).

THE SOVEREIGN.

FIRST, in honour and dignity, as in power—indeed, the seat and fountain of all three—is the Sovereign, who possesses, according to Camden,

"Many rights and privileges peculiar to majesty, termed by the learned lawyers sacra sacrorum, that is, sacred and individual, or inseparable, because they cannot be severed; and the ordinary royal prerogatives, termed the flowers of his crown, in which respect they affirm that the regal material crown is adorned with flowers. Some of these are held by positive or written law, others which, by right of custom, by a silent consent of all men without law, prescription of time has allowed, the king justly enjoys."

The Crown is held under the Act of Succession

(12 and 13 William III., cap. 2), the wording of which, with reference to succession, is —

"For default of issue of the said Princess Ann and of His Majesty respectively the crown and regal government of the said kingdoms of England France and Ireland and of the dominions thereunto belonging with the royal state and dignity of the said realms and all honours titles regalities prerogatives powers jurisdictions and authorities to the same belonging and appertaining shall be remain and continue to the said most excellent Princess Sophia [of Hanover] and the heirs of her body† being Protestants"

Among the more clearly defined prerogatives of the British monarch are those of convoking,

* The heraldic crown is depicted as above and shows only half the fleur-de-lis on the rim as well as a crimson cap, whereas the cap of the actual State Crown is of purple. In 1838 Her late Majesty Queen Victoria commanded an Imperial State Crown to be made for her Coronation and State occasions of a design entirely different to the above illustration, with jewels taken from old crowns and others furnished. It consisted of diamonds, pearls, rubies, sapphires and emeralds set in silver and gold, it had a crimson velvet cap with ermine border, and was lined with white silk. Its gross weight was 39 oz 5 dwts troy. The lower part of the band, above the ermine border, consisted of a row of 129 pearls, and the upper part of the band of a row of 112 pearls, between which in front of the crown, was a large sapphire (partly drilled) purchased for the crown by King George IV. At the back was a sapphire of smaller size, and 6 other sapphires (three on each side), between which 8 emeralds. Above and below the seven sapphires were 14 diamonds, and around the eight emeralds 128 diamonds. Between the emeralds and the sapphires were 16 trefoil ornaments, containing 16 diamonds. Above the band were 8 sapphires, surmounted by 8 diamonds, between which were eight festoons consisting of 128 diamonds. In the front of the crown, and in the centre of a diamond cross-patée, was the famous ruby, said to have been given to Edward, Prince of Wales, son of Edward III. called the Black Prince, by Don Pedro, King of Castile, after the battle of Najera, near Vittoria, A.D. 1367. This ruby was worn in the helmet of Henry V. at the battle of Agincourt, A.D. 1415. It is pierced quite through, after the Eastern custom, the upper part of the piercing being filled up by a small ruby. Around this ruby, in order to form the cross, were 75 brilliant diamonds. Three other crosses-patée, forming the two sides and back of the crown, had emerald centres and contained respectively 132, 124, and 134 brilliant diamonds. Between the four crosses-patée were four ornaments in the form of the French fleur-de-lis, with 4 rubies in the centres, and surrounded by rose diamonds, containing respectively 85, 86 and 87 rose diamonds. From the crosses-patée issued four imperial arches composed of oak leaves and acorns, the leaves contained 798 rose, table, and brilliant diamonds, 38 pearls form the acorns.

set in cups containing 54 rose diamonds and one table diamond. The total number of diamonds in the arches and acorns was 108 brilliant, 116 table, and 559 rose diamonds. From the upper part of the arches were suspended four large pendant pear-shaped pearls, with rose diamond cups, containing 12 rose diamonds, and stems containing 24 very small rose diamonds. Above the arch stood the mound containing in the lower hemis here 204 brilliants, and in the upper 244 brilliants, the zone and arc being composed of 33 rose diamonds. The cross on the summit had 1 rose cut sapphire in the centre, surrounded by 4 large brilliants, and 108 smaller brilliants. Summary of jewels comprised in this crown—One large ruby, irregularly polished one large broadspread sapphire, 16 sapphires, 11 emeralds, 4 rubies, 1,363 brilliant diamonds, 1,273 rose diamonds, 127 table diamonds, 4 drop-shaped pearls, and 373 pearls. For the Coronation of King Edward VII. this Imperial State Crown was refitted and lightened (the smaller (weight 309½ carats) of the two larger portions of the Cullinan diamond presented by the Transvaal Colony, being subsequently added in detachable form immediately above the ermine band), the sapphire being now placed at the back. That for the Queen Consort was composed entirely of diamonds set in silver had eight arches, and contained the famous Koh-i-noor (or "Mountain of Light") diamond as its central jewel. These crowns must not be confused with St. Edward's crown, the official crown of England, which is only in evidence at a Coronation. The Imperial Crowns are refitted for each Sovereign, and are liable to be altered in design and arrangement. The special Imperial Crown used by King George V. at the Delhi Durbar 1911, and now among the Regalia at the Tower of London, cost £60,000, and is composed of 14½ arches and four crosses-patée with four fleurs-de-lis, between, the whole is mounted by an orb bearing another cross-patée. Some 6,170 diamonds were employed in its manufacture, and on the bandeau are 16 clusters, 4 of emeralds and diamonds, alternating with 4 of sapphires and diamonds, between each being clusters of brilliants. The centre cluster contains an especially fine Indian emerald weighing 14 carats.

† A limitation which appears to denote, however remote the contingency, the possibility of abeyance adjourning, removing and dissolving Parliament, refusing assent to Bills without which assent they cannot become law in reviving the number of Peers, declaring war at pleasure choosing and appointing all commanders and officers, by land and sea, and all judges, councillors, officers of state, magistrates, Archbishops, Bishops, and high ecclesiastical dignitaries, bestowing all public honours, and pardoning criminals, besides exercising many other powers, by the advice of the Cabinet Ministers, who, however, alone are responsible, the theory of English law being that the Sovereign cannot commit wrong.

Another theory of our law is that the King (or Queen) never dies—substantially, that the throne is never vacant, the succession of the heir being instantaneous and a meeting of the Privy Council is held immediately after the Demise of the Crown (usually the next day) to give directions for proclaiming the new Sovereign and to swear in the members of the new Privy Council, the proclamation taking place in London at St. James's Palace (Charing Cross, Temple Bar, and Royal Exchange two or three days later). To this first meeting of the Privy Council of the new Reign the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, etc., of London, although not themselves Privy Councillors, are invited. Since the Reform Act Parliament does not dissolve at the Demise of the Crown, and if at the time adjourned or prorogued meets immediately or if dissolved the old Parliament must meet at once and may serve for six months. The ceremony of coronation is therefore merely a solemn recognition and confirmation of the royal descent, and consequent right of succession and is not necessary for the security of the title to the crown. It is however highly essential, inasmuch as it tends to a formal establishment of those rights which the people claim from the monarch in return for the duty and allegiance they are bound to observe towards the new Sovereign.

(CORONATION) The date of the coronation is approximately fixed and proclaimed in London at the same place as the accession some months before the ceremony itself takes place and a special Commission is appointed to hear and determine petitions and claims in connection therewith.

The coronation ceremony is probably more splendid, emblematic and elaborate in England than in any other country. Instance the anointing, with oil, poured into the golden anointing spoon from the Ampulla or Golden Flagle a practice which has been continued upwards of one thousand years, the formal crowning (the Royal or St. Edward's crown being carried in the initial procession immediately in front of the Sovereign between the orb on the right and the sceptre with dove on the left), the several religious ceremonies besides the insignia of royalty among which regalia are a ruby ring to signify faithfulness, the Armills or bracelets (not now used) for good works, purple robes to attract reverence and a diadem, to blazon glory, also the Orb (a golden sphere enriched with jewels and surmounted by a cross the whole being some eleven inches in height) the emblem of sovereignty, two sceptres (Royal Sceptre with the Cross—in which is now set the Luger of the two greater portions of the Star of Africa diamond and weighing 510½ carats and the Sceptre with the Dove) four swords all carried upright—(the Sword of State in scabbard two handed, borne in front of St. Edward's Crown, the Sword of Mercy, or Curtana (without point) carried between, on the left the Sword of Justice to the Spirituality (obtusely pointed) and on the right the Sword of Justice to the Temporality (sharp pointed), the golden spurs (prick spurs) borne in front of Curtana, between on the right St. Edward's Staff (with an orb at the end of it), and on the left the Sceptre with the Cross. [For fuller description of the Regalia see DE HERETIS CORONATION (UIDE).]

Briefly the principal features of the Coronation Ceremony (occupying about four hours), which on each successive occasion closely follows former precedent, are as follows. The Sovereign (and Consort), accompanied by the members of the Royal Family, go to Westminster Abbey [see rough plan], and the Regalia and other emblems being all ready prepared there, and having been handed to those who are to bear them, the King, robed in crimson robes and wearing a Cap of Estate, and the Queen Consort, in purple and wearing a circlet of gold, walk in procession with those carrying the regalia, and proceed through the west door. Being received with an Anthem, they go through the Choir, up the stairs to the Theatre, passing by their Thrones (1 and 2)—a series of raised steps—that on the right of five steps for the Sovereign that on the left a smaller one of three steps for the Consort surmounted by Chairs of State. [This Theatre, or elevated platform, is erected under the lantern and between the north and south transepts of the Abbey.] They then kneel at faldstools, set before Chairs of State (3) on the south side of the Altar. The Archbishop of Canterbury first recites the Recognition form at each of the four sides—east, south, west and north—of the Theatre, turning to each of these four directions, the Sovereign meanwhile standing up, also turning and showing himself to the people at every of the four sides of the Theatre, and the people assembled replying with 'God save King'—(or Queen)—the trumpets then sound. The Bible, Chalice and Paten having now been placed on the Altar, those carrying the Regalia (except the Swords) deliver them up, to be also placed upon the Altar. The Litany is then sung by two Bishops, vested in copes, and kneeling at a faldstool (4) in the middle of the east side of the Theatre, the ante Communion Service is next recited and a short sermon preached. The Sovereign, when a King (having uncovered during the Litany) here resumes his Cap of State wearing it to the end of the sermon, while the Bishop of Durham and the Peers carrying the Swords stand on the Sovereign's right hand the Bishop of Bath and Wells and the Lord Great Chamberlain being on the left.

before him passes through the door (7) on the south side of the Altar into St. Edward's Chapel, the Regalia being handed from the Altar by the Dean of Westminster to the Peers appointed to carry them. In like manner the Queen Consort, bearing her Sceptre in her right hand and her Ivory Rod in her left passes into St. Edward's Chapel by the door (8) on the north side of the Altar. Here standing before St. Edward's Altar (9) certain portions of the Regalia are given up and placed upon it, then having retired to the Traverses (10) provided and the Sovereign having exchanged the Imperial Mantle for his Robe of Purple Velvet, the Sovereign (now wearing the Imperial Crown) and the Consort bearing in their right hands the Sceptre with the Cross, and in their left, the Sovereign the Orb and the Queen Consort the Ivory Rod with the Dove, pass to the west door of the Abbey accompanied by the Banners of the Swords and the Regalia. The Peers wearing their Coronets.

All swords in the Coronation procession are carried naked as well as erect throughout, except the Sword of State which for a short period in the early part of the ceremony is carried in its scabbard.

There are three sets of robes used by the Sovereign during Coronation ceremony: (1) A crimson Robe of State worn on entering; (2) the actual Coronation vestments themselves, consisting of the Culumen Sindonis or sleeveless coat the Supertunica, the Armil or Stole, and the Imperial Mantle or Pall of Cloth of Gold; and (3) the Royal Robe of purple velvet worn in the procession from the Abbey, thus the Sovereign enters the Abbey in crimson, is crowned in gold, and leaves it in purple.

The derivation of the word King, is according to Chamberlayne from the Saxon word Aenig, or Cyning, which comes from Cen intimating power, or Aen knowledge, wherewith every Sovereign should be invested.

Some of the titles of our Saxon kings were very quaint and pompous. These were discontinued by the Normans, and it was not until Henry IV. adopted the title of "Grace," that prefixes came into use. These prefixes were successively changed (at the pleasure of the sovereigns themselves) into "Excellent Grace," "High and Mighty Prince," and "Highness," until Henry VIII. adopted the self Majesty and Died Sovereign.

In 1876 Queen Victoria was proclaimed Empress of India, but the Imperial Dignity is not adopted in any part of the dominions except India. In 1901 the following addition was made to the style and title of King Edward VII.—viz. "and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas."

The Sovereign banner commonly called the Royal Standard is the personal flag of the Sovereign, and can only properly be flown over buildings or ships with His Majesty's permission, which permission is only granted when the King or Queen is actually present in person, and it is when their Majesties are passing in procession.

THE QUEEN CONSORT

The Queen Consort of the Sovereign has a separate Court and Household as represented in Courts of Law (where she can sue or be sued in her own name with the title of "Queen of England") by her own Attorney General and Solicitor General and to compass or imagine her death (during the lifetime of her husband) is high treason. Provision is made for her by Statute, and she is usually though not of right crowned with the King.

THE QUEEN MOTHER

Takes precedence immediately after the Queen Consort and has her own Household.

THE HEIR-APPARENT TO THE CROWN

Is next below the Sovereign in all honour and dignity—not as participating or comparing with the latter—who stands alone and supreme, but as enjoying the largest share of the honour which flows from the Crown.

No person can hold this position save a child of the Sovereign, or, if the former be dead, his, or her, direct descendant. This constant preference of the direct line to the closest collateral branch distinguishes the European from some of the Asiatic orders of succession, and tends greatly to preclude confusion and discord.

The male Heir Apparent has, since the institution of the title by Edward I. (who, in 1301, conferred it on his son, Edward, born at Carnarvon in 1284), been usually, but not invariably created Prince of Wales, and, since 1399, the Earl-dom of Chester has always been conferred, together with the Principality of Wales. There is no succession to this title, which, at every vacancy, becomes merged in the Crown, and is only renewed by the Sovereign's pleasure. Thus, had George IV. died whilst Prince of Wales, his next brother, though heir apparent, would not have been the Prince of Wales without being so created, similarly on the succession of King Edward VII. his eldest surviving son was not Prince of Wales until so created some eight months later.

PRINCE OF THE ELDEST SON OF THE

The Sovereign's eldest son is Duke of Cornwall from the moment of his birth, and becomes immediately entitled to the revenues of his Duchy, while minority is not to his being a member of the House of Lords, although it is usual to delay creating the seat until full age is reached.

THE SOVEREIGN

When there is no Duke of Cornwall, the Duchy is in the custody of the Crown, and the revenues are paid to the King. The title, however, unlike that of Prince of Wales, does not always become merged in the Crown on succession to the Monarchy or at death, but passes at once to the next heir-apparent being the eldest living son of the Sovereign to whom it is strictly limited, but in the event of the death of such heir-apparent his eldest son would not be Duke of Cornwall. Fully in Queen Victoria's reign the net revenues of the property were about £74,000 per annum, but under the able superintendence of the late Prince Consort (husband of Queen Victoria) a new system was introduced and the income now enjoyed in virtue of the Duchy rights is very considerable. The Sandringham estate was purchased out of a very large sum of ready money, arising from the accumulation of the annual revenues of this Duchy during minority.

By course of the civil law he sits at the right hand of the Sovereign in all solemn assemblies of state and honour, but he has no kindly prerogatives, and acknowledges reverence to his sovereign.

An old statute of Edward III. enacts "that to compass or imagine the death of the King's eldest son and heir is crimen lèse majestatis" (high treason).

On the union of the Crowns of England and Scotland, King James's son (Prince Henry) was created "Prince of Great Britain and Ireland" and this nominally higher title survives, but the more venerable honour long since caused the other to fall into disuse.

The theoretical forms laid down for the ceremony

* This title of feoffers is generally spoken of as "The Prince of Wales." It often is not in reality such, but is the title of the Heir Apparent in whom it is vested when created Prince of Wales or not.

of creating and investing a Prince of Wales are thus —

"He is presented before the King in his surcoat, cloak and mantle of crimson velvet and girt with a belt of the same, when the King putteth a cap of crimson velvet, indented and turned up with ermine, and a coronet on his head, as a token of principality, and the King also putteth into his hand a verge of gold, the emblem of government, and a ring of gold on his middle finger to intimate that he must be a husband to his country and a father to his children. To him are likewise given and granted letters patent to hold the same principality, to him and his heirs, Kings of England, by which words the separation of this principality is for ever prohibited. The coronet placed on his head is of gold, and consists of crosses patée and fleur de lys with the addition of one arch and in the midst a ball and a cross, as hath the royal diadem which was solemnly ordered to be used by a grant dated February 9, 1660-61, 11th Charles II, xxx. His mantle which he wears at the coronation is doubled below the elbow with ermine, spotted diamond wise. But the robe which he wears in Parliament is adorned with bars or guards of ermine set at an equal distance one from the other, with a gold lace above each bar."

At the ceremony of investiture the Sovereign having received the Letters Patent from the Lord Great Chamberlain hands them to the Home Secretary to read as follows:—

— by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas King Defender of the Faith

To all Archbishops Dukes Marquesses Earls Viscounts Bishops Barons Knights Justices Provosts Masters and all other Our faithful Subjects greeting

The Prince then does homage for the Principality of Wales and the Earldom of Chester, and the Home Secretary returns to the Sovereign the Letters Patent to be placed in the right hand of his Royal Highness by the Sovereign, who at the same time raises the Prince from his knees and salutes him on each cheek

Investiture takes place at Carnarvon Castle on a raised platform in the inner courtyard, and after investiture the Prince of Wales proceeds to Queen Eleanor's gateway of the Castle and is there presented (as well as at other points) to his people

In 1808 Letters Patent under the Great Seal were granted, declaring that the children of the eldest son of any Prince of Wales shall at all times have the title of 'Royal Highness'

OTHER MEMBERS OF THE ROYAL FAMILY

The rank and position of these are defined in the general 'Table of Precedence'

The Royal Marriage Act prohibits the marriage of personages (descendants of George II) connected with the Blood Royal (except issue of Princesses who have married into Foreign Families) without the sanction of the Sovereign but this is considerably modified by a conditional proviso or door of grace by which a marriage contracted after the age of twenty five is valid if a year's notice has been given to the Privy Council and both Houses of Parliament, and they have not interfered during that period expressing their disapprobation. Marriages so contracted and the issue legitimate, do not confer upon the children any right of succession to hereditary honours.

are styled "Royal Highness" so also are the children of the eldest son of any Prince of Wales (see ante), while grandchildren being issue of daughters are usually granted by Royal Warrant the title of 'Highness'. From at least the time of George II and up to 1905 the courtesy title of 'Princess Royal' was conceded to and borne by the eldest daughter of the Sovereign for the time being without any special warrant, but an Nov. 1905 a Royal Warrant confirming this style and title to the Duchess of Fife (el dau of King Edward VII.) was gazetted.

The coronet of the Princes of the Blood Royal is similar to that of the Heir Apparent, but without the arch and orb.

THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY*

Is the first peer of England next to the Royal Family, preceding not only all Dukes, but all the great officers of the Crown. The Bishop of London is his provincial Dean, the Bishop of Lincoln his Chancellor and the Bishop of Rochester his Chaplain. It belongs to him to crown the King, and the Sovereign and his or her Consort, wherever they may be located, are specialis domesticus parochiani Arch. Cant. (parishioners of the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury).

The ecclesiastical and secular power of the Archbishop of Canterbury was formerly enormous, especially when he held the office of Lord Chancellor, and instances are not few in which the influence of the Archbishop's office was formidable to the throne itself. Since the Reformation the Archbishop's secular influence may be said to have altogether ceased.

The Archbishop of Canterbury is Primate of all England, is entitled to the prefix of "Your Grace," and styles himself "By Divine Providence, Lord Archbishop of Canterbury."

An Archbishop's mitre is the same as that of a Bishop.

THE LORD HIGH CHANCELLOR

Created by the will of the Sovereign, by the act of delivering the Great Seal into his custody, and in virtue of his office is the second peer in the Kingdom. He affixes the Great Seal to all patents, writs, and grants, holds office during the pleasure of the Crown, but practically resigns office with his entry as Speaker of the House of Lords, and in virtue of his office is a Member of the Privy Council, is Keeper of the Great Seal (of Great Britain), head of the Legal Profession in England, and President of the Supreme Court of Judicature. He signs the writs for summoning Parliament, and transacts all business connected with the custody of the Great Seal, is principal adviser to the Crown in matters of law, appoints the Judges of the High Court and the Judges of County Courts, inserts the names of justices in the commissions of the Peace, and is entitled to all Crown livings rated under £20 per annum. He visits or in right of the Crown of all hospitals and colleges of Royal Foundation, has the general guardianship of all infants, idiots, and lunatics, and exercises a special jurisdiction in questions relating to charities and trustees. He ranks above all dukes not of the Royal Family and next below the Archbishop of Canterbury. For many years the Lord High Chancellor (when not of Royal rank) has been invariably created a peer concomitantly with his appointment. During absence abroad on official business the office is put in commission.

THE ARCHBISHOP OF YORK

Is the third peer in the Kingdom, and precedes all secular peers, except the Lord High Chancellor. He is "Primate of England," has the privilege of "crowning the Consort," and is her perpetual chaplain. He is entitled to the prefix of "Your Grace," styles himself "By Divine Permission, Lord Archbishop of York," and possesses within his own province powers nearly equivalent to those exercised by the Archbishop of Canterbury within his

*The Archbishops of Canterbury, the Lord High Chancellor, and the Archbishop of York, constitute a kind of distinctive belt of separation between the Royal Family and general nobility, but the wives and children of Archbishops have not any special social precedence.

THE NOBILITY.

The true criterion of "nobility" is now as it always has been, the lawful bearing of arms, and in all countries outside the United Kingdom, the term "noble" is habitually used in this its original sense and in France at least precedence is invariably regulated by the date of the grant of arms, and not according to titular distinction, but in England the custom has arisen, however incorrect in itself, of practically restricting the use of the word "nobleman" to members of the peerage, and those who by courtesy bear titles in virtue of their immediate connection with noble houses. It should, however, always be borne in mind that, strictly speaking, every one bearing duly authorised arms is equally entitled to be styled "noble," be he Peer, Baronet, Knight, or Gentleman.

The nobility (using the word in its proper acceptance) of this kingdom is usually divided into two classes—the greater and the less (nobiles majores and nobiles minores) the former customarily consisting of all degrees of the peer's spiritual and temporal from a Baron upwards and inclusive.

PEERS

Practically the degrees of the Peerage* in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland are five—viz., Dukes, Marquesses, Earls, Viscounts, and Barons (including Lords of Appeal in Ordinary who are Life Peers), to which may be added a sixth—viz., those Archbishops, and bishops, who are entitled to a seat in the House of Peers, and possess all the faculties and privileges of Peers of Parliament during the time they hold office.

The ceremony of admitting a peer into the House of Lords is thus: He is introduced by two peers of his own degree who conduct him to the Lord Chancellor. His patent is carried by a Gentleman of Arms, the new peer presents it together with his writ of summons to the Lord Chancellor, this dignitary directs the same to be read, the oaths are administered, the peer takes his seat, and then rising, returns to the Chancellor, who congratulates him upon his succession, or elevation, as the case may be.

The privileges enjoyed by peers were formerly very numerous. Some of these would now be considered intolerable, while others have fallen into desuetude from the extinction of the matters and circumstances to which they related. But some important ones continue, e.g.—

They are free from arrests for debt, as being the Sovereign's hereditary counsellors, therefore a peer cannot be outlawed in any civil action, and no attachment lies against his person, but if he becomes a bankrupt he cannot vote until his bankruptcy proceedings are ended.

They are free from attending county fairs, or sheriffs' turns, or, in cases of riot, the posse comitatus.

In criminal cases they are tried by peers only, who give their verdict simply upon their honour, in a court specially fitted up at the expense of the Crown in the middle of Westminster Hall.

* SCOTCH AND IRISH PEERS.—Scotch peers take precedence of British peers of the same rank created since the Union with Scotland, and Irish peers created before the Union with Ireland, in like manner, take place of British peers created since Irish peers of later creation than the Union, rank according to the dates of their patents, among the peers of Great Britain and Ireland. Peers holding only Scotch or Irish titles do not sit of individual right in the House of Peers, but only as representatives of their fellow-peers.

Irish Representative Peers are elected by their fellow-peers for life.

Scotch Representative Peers are elected by their fellow-peers for one Parliament only.

Irish peers (not being representative peers) are permitted to represent English constituencies in the House of Commons, but cannot sit for Irish counties or boroughs.

Peers of England, Scotland, Great Britain and the United Kingdom are not entitled to sit in the House of Commons.

They may sit with their heads covered in courts of justice.

Each peer may qualify a certain number of chaplains as follows—An Archbishop eight, a Duke, six, a Marquess, five, an Earl, five, a Viscount, four, a Bishop, six, a Baron, three. A Knight of the Garter may qualify three, and a Peeress, being a widow, two.

To secure the honour of, and to prevent the spreading of any scandal upon peers or any great officers of the realm by reports, there is an express law, called scandalum magnatum, by which any man convicted of making a scandalous report, though true, against a peer of the realm, is condemned to an arbitrary fine and to remain in custody till the same be paid.

Barons King-of-ale and Forester are the only peers claiming the privilege of remaining covered in the royal presence without special permission.

In case of a poll tax, peers bear the greatest burden, as everyone is then taxed according to his degree.

A peer may not interfere in any way in the election of members to Parliament.

A peer is entitled to have Supporters granted to be borne with his title, and to the use of the oronet of his rank, but the eldest sons of peers are not entitled to the use of either coronet or supporters, neither are the younger sons of dukes and marquesses or of any peer.

Claims to peerages are dealt with by the Committee for Privileges of the House of Lords.

Occasionally the eldest son of a peer is summoned to the House of Lords during his father's lifetime in one of his father's minor titles, and should he predecease his father the title and seat would pass to his son (if any).

The principal rules or considerations as generally applied to the selection of Peerage titles are as follows—

In the first place it should be borne in mind that the Sovereign as the fountain of all honour can of course bestow any title. He may please, but in practice the following rules are usually observed, although there are certain exceptions—

Titles once conferred upon any member of the Royal Family are not now ever again bestowed outside the Royal Circle.

Every peer must be described in his patent as 'of ——— (somewhere)' usually the principal seat of the recipient or some place with which he has definite connection.

Any semblance of duplication of titles is avoided in as far as ever possible.

A surname may, if desired, always be adopted as a title, although another dignity of the same style be already in existence, but in that case the recipients of all such similar (surname) titles of the same rank except the first one to be created must habitually add the territorial designation as an affix to the title by which they are commonly known. For instance, Baron Stanley (creation 1455), Baron Stanley (creation 1832) known as 'Lord Stanley of Bickerstaffe'; Baron Stanley (creation 1838) as 'Lord Stanley of Alderley'; Baron Stanley (creation 1886) as 'Lord Stanley of Preston'. Again, Baron Curzon (creation 1794) and Baron Curzon (creation 1898) as 'Lord Curzon of Kedleston'.

It is also always permissible for any peer to use as an affix to his title the territorial designation indicated in his patent, whether it appears there as part of the title or not, but the number of peers who have been created with a territorial designation as actually part of the title is very limited, and of those whose patents indicate creations of this nature, some modern instances are the creations of Lords Leith of Fyvie, Murray of Elbank, Parker of Waddington, and Ritchie of Dundee.

In the case of Life Peers the surname is usually (though not always) adopted.

A title once extinct but subsequently revived is rarely re-created in a lower rank than before, but this rule is not an invariable one [vide titles of Barrymore and Eversley].

The name of a county or county town is not a title permissible as a peerage title below the rank of earl (although exception may be made in favour of any one particularly eminent either as a statesman or in some other walk of life). Towns of large population are usually reserved for the higher steps in the peerage.

It may be added that peers—excepting the archbishops and bishops who each have special signatures of their own—sign by their titles only, as also do the eldest sons of peers, bearing as a courtesy title one of their father's minor honours, but a peeress by marriage signs with her Christian name or initial prefixed to the title. A peeress in her own right however signs with title only, just as a peer.

Duke—This title is the highest of our designations of nobility. We have not 'princes' outside the blood royal.

DUKE'S CORONET

Indeed, so pre-eminent in dignity is the ducal title, that each royal prince on or shortly after attaining his majority, is usually created a Duke, as if the latter were the superior distinction. Thus Prince Alfred was created Duke of Edinburgh and Prince Arthur Duke of Connaught.

Much learned ingenuity has been expended in endeavouring to trace the origin of a title which has, in one meaning, or another, existed since the origin of the Latin tongue—dux (leader) indicating a leading man or chieftain, and however antiquarians may refine upon the matter there cannot be any doubt that the word 'duke' means a man of the highest rank and mark.

Hollingshead, in his "Chronicle," f. 235, says that "King Edgar's second wife was called Alfreda, the daughter of Orgar Duke of Devon, by whom hee had ysue, Egeltred, that it was afterwards Kinge of this lande and is beried in Powlis." This, however, may have been only an official title, for the word frequently appears in Saxon chronicles in a sense inferior to that of earl, bishop, and even abbot.

Otho the Great, about the year 970, is supposed to have been the first to regularly constitute the title of duke, as one of honour and nobility, and it became hereditary in France and other parts of the Continent long before it was adopted in England. It has been surmised that one cause of its not being introduced earlier in England was the reluctance of the Norman kings—theirselfes, Dukes of Normandy—to grant subjects a title resembling their own.

The following passage from a quaint old writer gives an authentic account of the creation of the first English Duke—

"The first Duke that I finde since the Conquest was made by Kinge Edward III. xj. regni sui where he made of the earldome of Cornwaile a dutchye, and created the Black Prince, his eldest sonne, Prince of Wales, Duke of Cornwaile, and Earl of Chester, and I have a dede made by the said Black Prince, wherein his stile is, Edward Disne Fitz de Roy D Engleterre et de France, Prince de Aquitaine et de Gales, Duc de Cornwall, Count de Chester and Seigneur de Bescune."

In former times hereditary dukes were created with the following or similar words—

"We give and grant the name, title, state, style, place, seat, pre-eminence, honour, authority, and dignity of a Duke and by the cincture of a sword, and imposition of a cap and coronet of gold upon his head, as also by delivering unto him a verge of gold, we do really invest," &c.

but this and other ceremonies formerly attending the creation of dukes and other peers are no longer observed.

The ducal order, which was extinct, or in abeyance during Elizabeth's reign, was revived by James I in the person of his favourite, Villiers.

The mantle or surcoat (to be worn over full Court dress uniform or regimentals) which a duke wears at a coronation of king or queen is of crimson velvet lined with white taffeta, edged with miniver (i.e. the white fur of the ermine or stoit, with the natural black tails left attached) and the cape furred with miniver pure (i.e. the white fur of the ermine without the black tails) and powdered with four bars or rows of ermine (i.e. narrow pieces of black fur symmetrically sewn on). His parliamentary robes are of fine scarlet cloth lined with taffeta and doubled with four guards of ermine at equal distances, with gold lace above each guard, and tied up to the left shoulder by a white riband, his cap is of crimson velvet turned up with ermine having a gold tassel on the top, his coronet is a circle of gold (silver gilt) chased as jewelled and set round with eight strawberry leaves. Parliamentary robes for other degrees are similar to above, with the distinguishing number of guards. He is styled His Grace and by the Sovereign in public instruments, Our right trusty and right entirely beloved cousin, with the addition of and counsellor when a member of the Privy Council. The coronation robe of a duchess consists of a crimson velvet mantle with cape furred with miniver pure, the cape powdered with four rows of ermine (i.e. narrow pieces of black fur), and edged round with miniver pure five inches wide, the kirtle meeting at the waist over a white panel and the bodice being low and tight fitting, with stomacher and panel of white or cream material, fur bordering the top of the bodice and being continued in a band over each shoulder. Her coronet is the same as that of her husband while her train is two yards in length.

The eldest son of a duke bears by courtesy one of his father's inferior titles, and each younger son and daughter is addressed by his or her Christian name, as 'Lord John' or 'Lady Mary.'

Marquess is a title apparently of German origin, and, is the name in places derived from the Government of marches or frontier provinces. It is called by the Saxons Markin Kerec and by the Germans, Markgravi. It is the next place of honour to that of a duke and was introduced many years subsequent to the establishment of that dignity in England.

The first on whom this honour was conferred was the great favourite of King Richard II Robert de Vere, Earl of Oxford who was created Marquess of Dublin in 1385 and placed in Parliament between the dukes and earls. The marquesses were created by the king by 'constitute of the sword and imposition of the cap of honour and dignity with the coronet is also by the delivery of a charter or writing.' The creations, however, were not very numerous and it would appear that the new honour was not greatly coveted by the old nobility as in the Parliamentary Rolls it is recorded that

"John de Beaufort, Earl of Somerset was by Richard II created Marquess of Dorset and when afterwards Henry VI deprived him of that title the Commons of England made humble suit in Parliament to the King that he would restore him to his title of marquess. The Earl himself opposed the petition, saying, that 'It was a new dignity and altogether unknown to his ancestors and that, therefore, he neither craved it, nor in any wise would he accept it.'"

The creation to this dignity was formerly attended with nearly the same ceremony as that of a duke, but it now simply takes place by patent under the Great Seal.

The coronation robes are the same as those of a Duke with three and a half rows of ermine

(i.e. four on the right side, and three on the left), the cap is of crimson velvet turned up with ermine, having a gold tassel at top, the coronet is of gold (silver gilt) chased as jewelled, with four silver balls, and four golden strawberry leaves mixed alternately, the latter raised a little on points above the rim. A marchioness's coronation robe has four inches of miniver and three and a half rows of ermine and the train is a yard and three quarters long. The coronet of a marchioness is the same as that of a marquess.

The general style of a marquess is Most Honourable and he is styled by the King or Queen, Our right trusty and entirely beloved cousin, and counsellor when of the Privy Council.

The eldest son of a marquess bears by courtesy one of his father's inferior titles, and each younger son and daughter is addressed by his or her Christian name, as "Lord George," or Lady Jane.

Earl—It has been customary to identify this ancient English dignity with the Latin Comes 'Companion' French Comte, Anglice, (Count) one of the duties or privileges of possessors of the title being to accompany the King and to give counsel, advice, and aid on important occasions. We are told that "Constantine the Great, in order to secure the attachment of his followers, created a number of these Comites, as Comes Domesticonum (Master of the Household), Comes Stabuli (Master of the Horse), also such dignities as Comes Orientis, Comes Africa (Lieutenant of the East of Africa, &c.) Thence ever after the name of Comes imparted dignity, and the authority or government, which was at first temporary, was afterwards enjoyed for life. Moreover, in process of time when the Roman empire was divided into many kingdoms this title was retained and our English Saxons called those in Latin Conites and Consules whom, in their own language they called Ealdormen the same which the Danes in their tongue called Forlas that is honourable as Forth ward writes, by which name somewhat softened, they are called by us, at this day, Earls.' In the Saxon times the title was one of the highest dignity and eminence. Earl Godwin occupied a rank much higher than that of any noble of the present day. It was even applied to sovereign princes. Thus William the Conqueror, sovereign of Normandy, is frequently called Earl of Normandy, and William of Malmesbury never mentions him otherwise. The Norman kings adopted the Saxon title, and the first earls created were dignitaries of enormous power, holding not only proprietary, but virtually sovereign sway over large districts of country. Hugh Lupus, Earl of Chester was a real potentate within his territory though exercising his authority in the name of the king, and so with others. But the number of earls increased rapidly, whilst the possibility of furnishing them with land and revenue diminished in proportionate ratio, so that various devices were resorted to for the purpose of furnishing the new creations with the means of support. The dignity of the distinction was thus depreciated. Earls were then created with the name of some place appended to the title, and the third penny of the shire was assigned unto them, for example, the Empress

* Immediately after the Conquest earls began to be feudal, hereditary, and parliamentary—that is, by fee or tenure by service, by inheritance, and by lands. In the Domesday Book they were named earls without addition—Earl Hugh, Earl Roger, &c.

† Of course this source of provision had a limit, and at a subsequent period the monarch was accustomed to assign pensions not only to earls, but to other persons whom he ennobled in the following proportions—Viccounts a fee of 30 marks, Barons, of £30, Marquesses, a fee of 40 marks, and Dukes of 400 out of some particular part of the royal revenue. A creation fee to barons was not settled but Charles I when he created Mountjoy Blount, Lord Mountjoy, of Thuroton, Derbyshire, assigned to him and his issue male a creation fee of 20 marks per annum.

Maud, daughter and heir to King Henry I created an earl in the following words:—

"I, Maud, daughter of King Henry, and ladies of the Englishmen, doe give and grant unto Geoffrey de Marevaunt for his service, and to his heirs after him, by right of inheritance, to be Earle of Essex, and to have the third penny out of the Sheriff's Court, issuing of all places, as an Earle should have thowen his countree in all things."

The earl's coronation robe is the same as a duke's, except that he has only three rows of ermine, his cap is the same as theirs. It is uncertain when the coronets of dukes, marquesses, and earls were settled. Sir Robert Cecil, Earl of Salisbury, Viscount Cranbourne, was the first of that degree who wore a coronet. An earl's coronet is a circle of gold (silver gilt) chased as jewelled and bordered with ermine, heightened with eight pyramidal points, or rays, placed alternately with as many strawberry leaves, a large silver ball is placed on the top of each ray. His style is Right Honourable, and he is addressed by the King or Queen as Our right trusty and entirely beloved cousin, and counsellor when of the Privy Council. A countess has on her coronation robe three inches of miniver and a like number of bars of ermine, the train being a yard and half long while the coronet is the same as that of an earl.

The eldest son of an earl bears by courtesy one of his father's inferior titles, each younger son is styled "Honourable," as the "Hon. Robert," and each daughter is styled "Lady," as "Lady Emma."

Viscount (Viscomes) was anciently the name of him who held the chief office under an earl. The latter being often at Court, the viscount was his deputy to look after the affairs of the county. In the reign of Henry VI. 1439, the title became a degree of honour, and was made hereditary. The first viscount in England, created by patent, was John, Lord Beaumont, who was by the above monarch created Viscount Beaumont and he gave him precedence above all barons.

The coronation robes of a viscount are the same as a duke's, with the exception that he has only two and a half rows of ermine (i.e., three on the right and two on the left side), his cap is the same, and the gold (silver gilt) circle of his coronet is surmounted by sixteen silver balls. The robe of a viscountess has two and a half inches of miniver and two and a half bars of ermine, a yard and a quarter train while the coronet is the same as her husband's. His style is Right Honourable, and he is addressed by the King or Queen as Our right trusty and well beloved cousin.

All children of Viscounts bear the courtesy title of "Honourable," as the "Hon. Henry," or the "Hon. Margaret."

Bishops—The Bishops of England, with the exceptions noted,* are also barons of the kingdom and of Parliament. To these, says Camden—

"By right and custom it appertained to be with the rest of the peers personally present at all Parliament whatsoever, there to consult to handle, to ordain, decree and determine in regard of the baronies which they held of the king."

Bishops take precedence of the temporal barons, and it would seem that at one time their degree of precedence went even higher, for—

"At the coronation of Charles II. it was

* The seven (ten when the new bishoprics are filled) Junior Bishops not being of London, Durham, or Winchester, have not seats in the House of Lords. The Bishop of Exeter and Man have neither seat nor vote in the House of Lords, as he is a legislator in the Isle of Man.

expressly ordered in doing homage to the king, that, according to ancient custom, the archbishops and bishops should precede all the lay lords, and even the Duke of York." The Bishops of London, Durham, and Winchester have precedence over all the other bishops, who rank according to the seniority of their consecrations.

ARCHBISHOP'S AND BISHOP'S MITRE

A bishop resigning his see ceases to be a peer of Parliament.

Every bishop is entitled to the prefix of Lord, and styles himself "Right Reverend Father in God by Divine Permission, I, our Bishop of—"

The mitre, placed over the arms of a bishop, is a round cap, pointed and cleft at the top, from which hung two pendants, fringed at the ends, it is surmounted by a fillet of gold, set with precious stones. The mitre of the Bishop of Durham (as nominally Count Palatine of Durham) is, however, represented as issuing out of a ducal crest coronet.

Bishops of Ireland who were consecrated prior to the Disestablishment Act of 1868 were entitled to the prefix of "Lord," and though retaining their former precedence, had no seats in the House of Lords. All Archbishops and Bishops of the Church of Ireland and of the Roman Catholic Church have the precedence which I clonged to the Archbishops and Bishops of the Established Church of Ireland before the passing of the Irish Church Act of 1869, and they rank inter se according to the dates of their consecration or translation.

A bishop impales his arms with those of the See, but he does not bear crest, supporter, or motto.

The wives and children of bishops have not any special precedence.

Baron *—Much obscurity prevails as to the ancient meaning, and even derivation of, the word baron, and eccentric speculations have been indulged in with respect to their ancient position. By some it was supposed to have originally meant a hired soldier by others, a free man or again, a man equal to any other man, and so on. It never occurs as a title of dignity in Saxon annals, and although the Normans introduced it into England (the Anglo-Saxon thane being changed into baron) it was some time before it implied a man of distinguishing mark. Earls had their barons under them, and charters are extant in which earls addressed them thus: 'To all my barons, as well French as English, greeting.' Even citizens of good note were sometimes called barons. The salient fact however, is that the barons of England soon rose to be the great moving power in the State, and how the title was accounted may be judged from a summons of Henry III. to the High Court of Parliament—

For he after many troubles and enormous vexations betwene the King himselfe and Simon I. Montfort with other barons and after a great deal of debate and ordune that all those earls and barons of the realme of England untill within the King himselfe vouchsafed to direct li writs of summons should come into his Parliament and none others.

The date of this (the first precept) is 4 Henry III. 1264.

The first baron created by patent was John Beauchamp de Holt created Baron Kidderminster by Richard II. in 1387. The fact appears to be that the title or dignity of baron at first vague and uncertain, like other designations and distinctions of distended times, was like those mellowed and moulded with the growth of constitutional law and defined right until it has taken its present intelligible position amongst English orders and degrees of honour.

The succession to baronies by writ is not limited to heirs male but is vested in heirs general. In the event of the death of a baron by writ without male issue the title will fall into abeyance should he leave two or more daughters and will continue until only one daughter or the sole heir of one of the daughters survives. The crown can however at any time terminate the abeyance in favour of any one of the co-heiresses but it cannot alienate the barony from the representatives of the first baron.

When a baron is called to the House of Peers by writ of summons the writ is in the sovereign's name.

The coronation robes of a baron have but two rows of ermine in other respects they are the same as those of other peers. King Charles II. granted a coronet to the barons who until his reign wore only a chain circle of gold. The coronet is framed of six silver bells set at equal distances on an unchained circle of gold (silver gilt) bordered with ermine. A baroness has two inches of miniver and two bars of ermine on her coronation robe which has a chain of gold. She wears a coronet same as that of a baron.

A baron is styled Right Honourable and by the sovereign Right trusty and well beloved.

To illustrate the meaning of COURTESY TITLES, reference may be made to the terms in which a Royal Commission issued. The first Earl Russell a younger son of the sixth Duke of Bedford, was before his elevation to the peerage, designated by courtesy Lord John Russell, whereas, strictly, he would have been simply "John Russell, Esq., but for the prefix of 'right honourable,' derived from his political offices. In Parliament and society he was invariably spoken of as "Lord John Russell, and addressed as "My Lord," but in Royal proclamations and other documents his designation was "The Right Honourable John Russell, commonly called Lord John Russell."

LIFE PEERS

Lords of Appeal in Ordinary, of whom there may not be more than six, are appointed by Patent and rank as Barons for life, and each is entitled to a writ of summons to attend, and to sit and vote in the House of Lords.

They hold office during good behaviour, notwithstanding the demise of the Crown, but may be removed from such office, on the address of both Houses of Parliament.

The dignity of Lords of Parliament does not descend to their heirs. Their wives rank as Baronesses and are entitled to the prefix of "Lady," while their children are now styled "Hon. and hold special precedence."

The robes of a Lord of Appeal in Ordinary are the same as a Baron.

LORDS OF SESSION IN SCOTLAND

Are the Senators of the College of Justice in Scotland and on appointment to the Bench receive the judicial title of Lord. — (most usually the surname), with the prefix of "Hon." by which they are known with the exception of the Lord Justice General and Lord Justice Clerk, both of whom use not the judicial title by which they take their seats, but then official designations being usually Officer of State.

By Royal Warrant granted in February 1905 Scottish Lords of Session who have retired are permitted to retain the title of "Honourable Lord" while their wives are also granted the title of "Lady" to be retained after the decease of the husband but during widowhood only.

BARONETS

The title of Baronet of ancient date and was originally given to a class of Bannereis who were hereditary Barons of Parliament, and occupied the same position as the existing dignity viz., between the great Barons (now peers) and lesser Barons or Knights and gentlemen.

By the statutes of Richard II. every Arch Bishop, Bishop, Abbot, Prior, Duke, Earl, Baron, Baronet and Knight of the Shire was commanded to appear in Parliament according to ancient usage, and in an attainder under Henry VI. one of the jury challenged himself because his ancestors had been Baronets and Seigneurs des Parlements.

This degree of nobility also existed in Ireland where it was hereditary, in certain families. Thus among others Sir Roger was Baronet of Slernarge, Fitzgerald, Baronet of Burchurch, Welleslye Baronet of Narriche (ancestor of the Duke of Wellington), and Nangle, Baronet of the Navan. These baronets were descended from some lesser barons or gentlemen whom Edward III. had been advised to summon by writ, to serve and sit as barons in his next Parliament, in order that by their votes he might carry his measures in defiance of the opposition of the Ecclesiastical Lords who had greatly crossed him in his designs. These persons having been summoned for one Parliament only did not retain their baronial rank and were afterwards styled baronets.

The circumstance of the discovery by Sir Robert Cotton, an eminent heraldic antiquary, of Letters Patent of the 13th Edward III., conferring the dignity of baronet on William de la Pole and his heirs "in return for a sum of money of which

* There is also a patent of 4 Edward VI. conferring the same rank honour and dignity of a Baronet on Ralph Fane (or Vane) Knight but without any special provision for succession [see Vane list].

* Barons are commonly styled Lords—e.g. Lord Coleridge.

life, before all squires* and are entitled to the prefix of "His Honour" but neither their wives nor issue have any defined precedence

ESQUIRES.

Amid the superfluity of discussion respecting the origin and meaning of the title of esquire, the obvious and natural conclusion is that, as the derivation is from scutifer (shield bearer), the esquires were those who bore the shields of princes, nobles, and knights, and, being themselves of respectable quality, imparted some of that respectability (further reflected from the great persons whom they attended) to their office. They were frequently the personal friends and companions of their patrons.

Thence the title became an object of ambition to gentlemen of the middle class and Camden says that "the title of esquire which in former times was a title of charge and office only, crept forth among other titles of dignity and worship." The same author enumerates five classes of esquires of graduated degrees of honour. We know no such distinction at the present time, but it has been a subject of dispute amongst our most learned writers as to whom the title of esquire really belongs.

It is however well understood that those to whom the title is of right due are noblemen's younger sons, and the eldest sons of such younger sons, and their eldest sons in perpetuity, the sons of baronets, and the sons of knights, the eldest son of the eldest son of a knight and his eldest son in perpetuity, officers of the sovereign's court and household, if holding not able employment, Commanders, Companions, and Members of any Order of Knighthood, Companions of the Distinguished Service and Imperial Orders, Kings of Arms, Herald of Arms, Sergeants at Law, Kings Counsel, certain principal Officers of the Household, Deputy Lieutenants and Commissioners of Excitement, Commissioners of the Court of Bankruptcy, Masters of the Supreme Court, persons to whom the Sovereign grants arms with the title of esquire, persons who are styled esquires by the Sovereign in their patents, commissions, or appointments, such as sheriffs of counties, officers in the army and navy of the rank of Captain and upwards, Royal Academics and any person who in virtue of his office takes precedence of esquires, justices of the peace for counties while in the commission or in office.

An esquire's helmet is depicted, in profile to the dexter with visor closed.

GENIUMEN.

If antiquarian controversy wax warm as to the class entitled to the style of esquire, the qualification for the name of gentleman has engrossed still more elaborate discussion. The question is

* In Ireland however, by warrant dated Oct. 11th 1858 the Judge of the High Court of Admiralty, the Attorney General, the Solicitor General, and the Judges at Law, have precedence over the Judges of the County Courts.

FOREIGN TITLES.

Foreign titles borne by British subjects afford their holders no precedence whatever in this country and, strictly speaking, a royal license should be obtained for their use. It should also be borne in mind that foreign titles cannot always be valued in comparison with English ones according to their nominal rank but their relative value has to be judged by the fact whether their possessors belong to the nobles majores or nobles minores [see 'Nobility'] of their respective countries.

Foreign authorities generally assume that titular distinction accompanied by an hereditary seat in the Diet or Parliament constitutes high nobility, and in France and Germany this is practically co-extensive with the ducal houses only. In England, however, the nobles majores (or high nobility) are co-extensive with the whole peerage (dukes, marquesses, earls, viscounts, and barons), such having an hereditary seat in the Upper House. It therefore, follows that only those families of the high nobility abroad, such as the herrogs and a few landgraves in Germany, and in France the dukes and two or three of the feudatory comtes can claim our peerage (dukes to barons) as equals in titular distinction, while the marquises in France and the margraves and grals of the Empire in Germany, if the latter are the titular chiefs of their families—are equal to our rank of baronet, the next rank (but without parliamentary seat) in England below the peerage; further, the nobles minores of Germany and France, varying between in France the rank of comte to that of baron or plai-ecuyer gentilhomme, and in Germany the grade of the new Empire down to, and including, the freilichs (by courtesy), and herr vons, rank according to the antiquity of their families with the families in England who are also of the nobles minores (knights, esquires, and gentlemen) not who is above it, but who is below it; for the highest in the land is proud of being a true gentleman, and it was regarded as the highest compliment ever paid to King George IV., when, as Prince Regent, he was called "the first gentleman in Europe." But if the true gentleman stand at so exalted an elevation, the assumption of the word has become so common as to have marred its meaning, which strictly speaking is the gentility conferred by the lawful bearing of arms, and is in that sense equivalent to the word nobleman. One not improbable derivation of the word gentleman is, that towards the decline of the Roman empire there were two companies of particularly distinguished soldiers, mostly of good families; one of these were called Gentiles, the other Scutarii, and it has been suggested that the titles, gentleman and esquire, may have been derived from this. Again, it is surmised that gentleman means descent from gentle lineage, to which Selden adds, that it is necessary he should follow the example of that lineage.

Solicitors, and persons in sundry other positions, are personally entitled to the addendum of "gentleman" to their names—an honour which few care to contend for, while fewer still would care to see "gent" written at the end of their names. The words "esquire" and "gentleman" have become so hackneyed, that though in their intrinsic acceptation they are highly honourable, yet as popularly written, each one is literally nominis umbra—the shadow of a name. The following, however, may be accepted as a direct definition of the relations of gentlemen, as between each other—

"The chief of the family takes place of any gentleman of the family, and though generally it be believed that gentlemen have no precedence one from another, yet reason and discretion allow that a gentleman of three generations should cede to a gentleman of ten, if there be not a very great disparity between their fortunes, and for the same reason that a gentleman of three generations claims precedence from any ordinary landed man who has newly acquired his lands.

MEMBERS OF THE CLERICAL, NAVAL, MILITARY, LEGAL AND MEDICAL PROFESSIONS, AND OF SOME OTHER CLASSES.

Have among themselves certain relative rank that is peculiar to each class, but, when associating together, the precedence is mostly of a local character, and being arbitrary, it does not give a defined position to any person who is excluded from the recognized "Table of Precedence."

CITIZENS AND BURGESSES.

Camden tells us that these "are such as in their own city perform any public function, or fill any particular office, or by election have a room in our High Court of Parliament." But this description must now be considerably enlarged, and practically the name is applied to all freemen and electors.

FORMAL MODES OF ADDRESSING PERSONS OF TITLE.

CORRECTNESS in addressing a person of title, or one holding high office, can only be attained by first discovering what is his, or her, precise social rank, or his official position. As the name of every individual referred to in the two classes indicated appears in Debrett's Peerage, Baronetage, Knighthood, and Companionage, there will be no difficulty in obtaining the requisite information. It must always be remembered that clerical, naval, and military prefixes are written before other titles, that initials indicative of distinction are written after the title or name, and that a High Officer of State or an official holding an important office, should be addressed by his official title when the communication refers to official business.

*. A Widow who re-marries loses any title or precedence she gained by her previous marriage. Society, however, from pure motives of courtesy, sanctions the retention of former rank, and with one exception permits ladies who have re-married to be addressed as though their titled husbands were living. The exception is that of the widow of an Honourable, who is not permitted even by courtesy to retain after re-marriage the prefix gained through her first husband. But, officially a widow who re-marries is not recognised as having any claim to bear the title of her deceased husband, e.g. at a coronation, or other State ceremonial, the widow of a peer would not be summoned as a peeress if she had subsequently married a commoner, and, if having espoused a peer of lesser degree than her former husband, she would only be recognised by the rank acquired by her last marriage.

Eldest Sons of Dukes, Marquesses, and Earls bearing courtesy titles, strictly speaking, should not be styled "Rt. Hon." unless themselves Peers or Members of the Privy Council.

Divorced Ladies — When a lady is divorced she loses any title or precedence which she gained by marriage, and should resume her maiden surname and precedence with the prefix "Mrs" if the daughter of a commoner With regard to divorced Peeresses, the Coll of Arms, acting on an opinion of the Lord Chancellor, has long held that such persons cannot claim the privileges or status of Peeresses which they derived from their husbands Divorced Peeresses are not summoned to a Coronation as Peeresses The above remarks apply to ladies who have divorced their husbands as well as to those who have been divorced

Dowager Lady is addressed according to her rank Immediately a peer, or a baroness, marries, the widow of the previous incumbent of the title becomes "Dowager" This prefix, however, is not generally appreciated, and during the last five and twenty years it has been very much less used than formerly. It is well that the change is rapidly taking place, because confusion constantly occurs when there are two or more "Dowagers in the same family, unless, according to their seniority, they be respectively termed "Dowager Dowager, or "Dowager Dowager Dowager." It is therefore recommended that each Dowager be addressed by her Christian name, as, "The Right Hon (Mary) Countess of —," etc etc, if a peeress (less formally, the "Rt Hon — is omitted), or, as Ellen, Lady —, if a Baroness widow. But the word "Dowager" should never be used except the lady addressed is either mother, or grandmother, of the present peer or baronet.

* If the daughter of a Duke, a Marquess or an Earl marry a Peer she is addressed according to the rank of her husband, and if she marry the eldest son of a Duke or Marquess she is known by her husband's courtesy title as also is the daughter of an Earl marrying an Earl's eldest son, but if the daughter of a Duke or Marquess marry the eldest son of an Earl she is sometimes addressed by the courtesy title of her husband, but more usually the husband's courtesy title (never his surname) is used with the prefix of Lady, thus—Lady Helen Stavordale.

The 1st baronet, Sir John Acland, in the service of Charles I, improved his fortune by raising and supporting a troop to garrison his house at Columb John. He was created a baronet, but in the confusion of the civil war the letters patent were destroyed and on the fall of the royal party he was fined £1800. After the Restoration new letters patent were granted but not till the year 1677, on account of a long minority in the family, in consideration of which the patent specially granted precedence from 1644. The 10th baronet sat as M P for Devon 1812-37, and for N Devon (C) 1837-54, and the Rt Hon Sir Thomas Dyke Acland, P C, 11th baronet sat as M P for W Somerset 1837-47, for N Devon (L) 1865-65 and for Somersetshire, W, or Wellington, Div 1865-6. This family, the name of which was originally "De Barneval," is of great antiquity. Sir Michael de Barneval, who landed on the coast of Cork in 1772, was the first of the family who settled in Ireland. The 2nd baronet suffered severely during the Cromwellian usurpation, and of the extensive possessions then wrested from him, he obtained, after the re-establishment of the monarchy, only his castle and 2,000 acres of land. The 3rd baronet was M.P. for Meath 1689-90. This baronetcy was dormant 1744-1821.

This family claims descent from George Brown, who married, 1543, Jean Hay, da of 3rd Lord Yester, ancestor of the Marquess of Tweeddale. The dowry of the lady consisted of the famous "Colstoun Pear" which her remote ancestor, Hugo de Gifford, of Yester, a famous necromancer, who d 1267, was supposed to have invested with the extraordinary virtue of securing unfailling prosperity for the family who might possess it. This pear is still preserved at Colstoun, and even when shorn of its superstitious surroundings is, nevertheless, a wonderful vegetable curiosity. Sir George Brown, 2nd baronet, m 1692, Lady Elizabeth Mackenzie, da of the 1st Earl of Cromartie, and it is reported that during the first night after her marriage when she slept at Colstoun, she dreamed she had eaten the pear. Her brother in law looked upon this as a bad omen, and expressed great fears that she would be an instrument to destroy the house of Colstoun. Be this as it may, Sir George sold the estates, and in 1718 was drowned with his family in the Tyne. On the death of the 5th baronet without male issue, his cousin the Rev Richard Brown (the next heir) never assumed the title as 6th baronet, but his eldest son James was served heir male general to his cousin, the 5th baronet in 1526, and assumed the Baronetcy as 7th baronet.

BROWN (or BROWNE), Creation (E) 1699, of London.

This Baronetcy has been assumed by CHARLES WILLIAM WOOLFE CLIFTON-BROWNE (of 23, St Patrick's Road, Ramsgate)—claiming as great-great-grandson of the Very Rev William Laurence Brown, DD, LL D, Principal of Mareschal Coll, Aberdeen, and Dean of the Thistle and Chapel Royal, grandson of the Rev. Laurence Brown, Min of Lintharthen, stated to be second son of Sir John Brown, 2nd baronet, son of Sir William Brown, 1st baronet (a merchant of Dundee, London, and Danzig), who in 1693 matriculated Arms at the Lyon Office as of the family of Brown, then represented by George Brown, of Horn, sometime Provost of Dundee,—but the present claimant has not established and recorded his right to the dignity at the Heralds' College. This branch of the family, however, did not assume the title on the death of the 3rd baronet, owing, it is said, to the supposition of an attainder (before his succession to the title) against the 3rd baronet, Sir John Brown, who fled to Poland after the battle of Culloden and after his espousal of the cause of Prince Charles Stuart; he died there, and the title was presumed to have become extinct, nothing being known regarding any relatives. The family of Carew is of great antiquity in Devon and Cornwall, and claims a common descent with the Dukes of Leinster and Earls of Plymouth from Otho a powerful English Baron temp Edward the Confessor, whose son, Walter Fitz Other, was Castellan of Windsor 1078. For several generations the heads of the family are described as Barons of Carew and Hidron, but none of them sat in Parliament with the exception of Nicholas de Carew, who subscribed to the celebrated Barons' letter to the Pope in 1300, and from his second son the present family is descended in a direct line.

Sir Humphrey Colquhoun, 3rd baronet, in 1704 resigned his Baronetcy to the Crown, and obtained a new patent with the old precedence, but with remainder to his son-in-law James Grant (who on succeeding to the Baronetcy assumed the surname of Colquhoun, but resumed that of Grant in 1710) and the heirs male of his marriage with Sir Humphrey's dau [see E. Seafeld]. In 1786 James, 4th son of the above-mentioned James Grant was cr. a Baronet of Great Britain. The 3rd baronet (cr. 1786), sat as M.P. for Dumbartonshire in 1802; and Sir James, the 4th baronet (who m. 1843, Jane, 2nd da. of Sir Robert Abercromby, 5th Bt., of Birkenbog, co. This family is descended in an unbroken male line from Corbeau (or Corbet), a noble Norman, who with his two sons came over with William the Conqueror. One of these sons, Roger Fitz-Corbet was father of William de Corbet who settled at Wattleborough Shropshire, and was the common ancestor of the present baronet, and of Peter Corbet of Caus Castle, who was summoned to Parliament as a Baron temp Edward I, which title became ext 1347. The Echlin family is of ancient Scotch origin, and formerly possessed princely estates in Scotland, and also large domains in the counties of Kildare, Carlow, Dublin Galway, and Mayo. Andrew Echlin, of Pittadro, Keshfshire, was Constable and Deputy Gov of Edinburgh Castle during the siege of 1572. His son, the Right Rev Dr Echlin, Bishop of Down and Connor who was barbarously murdered in 1635, was grandfather of Sir Henry Echlin, Knight, a Baron of the Court of Exchequer in Ireland, who was created a baronet in 1721. The 2nd baronet sat as M P for Newry. The 3rd baronet dissipated the family estates. The 4th baronet was one of the gentlemen before whom Hamilton Ronan knelt in the Court of King's Bench to beg the King's pardon. The Kildare estates were dissipated by the 4th, 5th, and 6th baronets.

The Esmondes are descended from a family, which was seated in the 10th century in co Wexford and one of whose members was Bishop of Ferns in 1340 and another Bishop of Emly 1356. In the reign of Elizabeth Sir Lawrence Esmond, abandoning the creed of his ancestors, espoused the cause of H M, professed himself a Protestant, and was created Lord Esmonde. He married a Roman Catholic lady, one of the O'Flahertys of Connaught, by whom he had a son. The mother, fearing that her child would be reared a Protestant, ran off with the boy, whom she brought up as a strict Catholic. By the statute of Kilkenny, the marriage was voidable in law. One son subsequently gained possession of the Wexford estate, and would probably have gained the peerage, but for the confusion wrought by civil war. He raised a troop of horse for the service of Charles I and commanded a Regiment in the Duke of Buckingham's expedition to Rochelle, on his return from which he was created a baronet in his father's lifetime. The 9th baronet the Right Hon Sir Thomas, sat as M P for Wexford (L) 1841-7, and the 10th baronet sat as M P for Waterford (L) 1852-76.

The family of Frere traces its origin to the latter end of the thirteenth century. The name of le Frere, as it was generally written, appears in documents and deeds of much earlier date in the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk. Richard Le Frere is reported to have fought under the banner of Robert Malet 1066 who received grants of land near Lye and Farningham, Suffolk, at which place

Richard Le Frere subsequently appears to have settled. The family of Frere have, from early times, held land in Norfolk, Suffolk and Essex. The 1st baronet was Chief Commissioner of Scinde 1850-59, Gov. of Bombay 1862-7 and Gov. of the Cape of Good Hope, and High Commr for British S Africa 1877-80.

In 1643 he was appointed Commissioner to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, a dignity which has not since been enjoyed by any commoner. The 11th baronet was M.P. for Midlothian (C) 1845-53.
